

Adult Learners' Week

20-26 September 2021

Your invitation to join Adult Learners' Week 2021

Adult Learners' Week plays a major role in promoting opportunities for individuals to learn new skills, find resources to support health and wellbeing, start new hobbies or to open conversations about retraining and making a fresh start.

The Adult Learners' Week platform has been developed to host information, courses, and special events to connect people to partners and stakeholders across Wales and beyond.

Last year, we hosted over 500 online courses from a wide range of organisations including The Open University, BT, Harding Evans Solicitors, the National Museum Wales, Sport Wales, Head 4 Arts and Swansea Lifelong Learning Service. Working in partnership with the Welsh Government, we successfully launched the platform as part of a multi-media campaign to promote adult learning at the height of the COVID-19 pandemic. Watch this video to find out more.

This year, as part of the Adult Learners' Week campaign we are planning for a mix of online, live and in-person events and courses, taster sessions, open days, and outreach events, that will be promoted to people across Wales throughout August and September.

To make 2021 even more successful, we need your support!

We need you to be part of Adult Learners' Week and use the platform to promote your courses, open events, online tasters and learning resources to help engage and inspire people to learn something new in way that suits them.

We are looking for partners to deliver live taster classes and special events for Adult Learners' Week and we'll promote any courses and resources that are available and listed on the site from August through to September.

Learning and Work Institute is continuing its partnership with the Welsh Government to build a network of campaign partners and to support this year's multi-media campaign with awareness raising, promotion and advertising across press, radio, social and digital media. Help us spread the word to get as many partners as possible on board – you can use these social media assets to promote this invitation to your networks.

The coronavirus pandemic has impacted the lives of many in our communities and has reinforced many inequalities. We need to enable many more people across Wales to engage with lifelong learning. Developing new skills provides a vital stepping-stone to improving life chances, choices, and opportunity.

Why should I take part?

- It's an opportunity to engage with new and existing audiences (there were over 130,000 searches on the site last year).
- You'll be part of a major partnership in Wales that aims to promote lifelong learning.
- You'll have a profile on the Adult Learners' Week platform, to encourage more awareness of your provision.
- You'll be playing a key role in connecting people in Wales to get support with health & wellbeing, learning and employment opportunities.
- You'll be part of a Wales-wide campaign to share positive, aspirational stories to inspire others to consider learning, developing new skills and make a fresh start.

What you'll need to provide...

We're looking for high quality free digital / in-person resources, courses and taster sessions that will help adults learn a new skill. If these are available in both English and Welsh, that's even better.

Content could include:

1. One-off / taster courses
2. Introductory courses
3. Masterclasses
4. Work sheets
5. Ongoing courses
6. Open days (virtual or in-person)
7. Community events
8. Webinars
9. Conferences
10. Links to careers advice and information
